

No More Lotteries in the Cigar Business

What is your cigar expenditure in a year?

Taking chances one at a time disturbs your comfort and enjoyment more than it seems to disturb your income or confidence; but after a year of it you've paid a very fat tax to a very flourishing lottery—and drawn a long list of blanks.

It's all unnecessary

We designed the Triangle A merit mark to be a sign to you—a sign that you could not only recognize but pronounce and ask for.

It enables you to make your selections from cigars that you know are the best your money can buy.

The New CREMO

is one of the most convincing examples of the improved quality produced through our new processes of refining tobacco.

Every box is extra-wrapped in glassine paper to make sure the cigars reach you fresh, clean and in the best smoking condition.

HUTCHINSON IS CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

Street Superintendent Asks to Be Returned to That Important Office.

Street Superintendent W. H. Hutchinson announces his candidacy for re-election today and asks the support of his friends, the voters, in the realization of that ambition.

Mr. Hutchinson is one of Pensacola's oldest and best known citizens, and his record for sterling integrity and good service in office has never been exceeded by a citizen of Escambia county. He has served as sheriff of the county, mayor of Pensacola, and in various other minor public positions and has always "made good." He is the man who first opened Palafox street north to the city limits. He graded the hill down, made the place passable, and also blocked off and planted grass in the lot where the public school now stands. The trees in Seville square were also planted by him.

Mr. "Hutch," as his friends familiarly call him, has always taken an interest in good streets and if re-elected he promises to give the city the best service there is in him.

resolution of both houses instead of only one.

Joint Resolutions.

Besides the various acts regarding education, the railroads, franchise taxes, etc., etc., that have been introduced in one house of the other, the legislature is confronted with a number of joint or concurrent resolutions that will require the consent of both houses, most of them referring to visits to the different state institutions, and one or two for the personal inspection of the drainage operations in the Everglades by a joint committee, all of which will probably pass, with possibly some unimportant amendments. The house Monday will probably receive from the senate H. C. R. No. 1, providing for an investigation of the Internal Improvement Fund, which was amended in the senate. The probabilities are that a joint committee will have to be appointed to draft a resolution suitable to both houses, for the house seems strongly of the opinion that the senate resolution, which the lower house tabled at their last session, is too exhaustive, and the senate seems to think that the house resolution, which they amended is too comprehensive, or non-comprehensive, as the case may be. The friends of each resolution claim that it will secure a complete investigation of the fund in the quickest time and with the least expense and that the other resolution will do just the contrary. The proposition in the senate resolution to employ counsel to assist the committee in investigating the fund is chiefly responsible for its defeat in the house, where it was defeated by Mr. Alchin. In a very strong speech that the committee should refrain from doing the thing for which most people are disposed to criticize the trustees of the fund, the employment of what is believed by these critics to be unnecessary counsel. Mr. Dorman, of Suwannee, who has a larger number of resolutions to his credit at the present time, probably than any other member of either house, has one on the calendar appealing to the trustees of the internal improvement fund to cease spending the public money in attempts at reclaiming the Everglades, until the people and tax payers of the state shall have expressed their willingness to proceed with the scheme. The preamble is a very lengthy one, and it is likely should the resolution pass the house, that it will contain a stronger word than the one in quotation marks. So far, it may be observed as a matter of fact without meaning any reflection on either house, it seems that the lower house in matters pertaining to the administration of state affairs, has been the most conservative in the matter of resolutions.

Constitutional Amendments.

There are a number of constitutional amendments before the proper committees in one house or the other. In the house Mr. Dorman has a resolution calling for a constitutional convention, and in the senate Senator Beard of the second, has a proposition to limit the suffrage in this state to white male citizens above the age of 21 years, as a means of testing the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the federal constitution, which Senator Beard declares were never ratified in the manner required by the constitution, and are, therefore not properly parts of the organic law. In the house Mr. Pettigrew, of Manatee, the little, white bearded Englishman with a high pitched voice which he does not use on the floor of the house except at roll calls, but is eager to put in practice at any and all times to discuss with any one the principles of the socialist party, whose dignity he maintains singly and alone in the legislature of Florida, the only one out of the hundred members, reminding one of that old song beginning "There were ninety and nine that safely lay in the shadow of the fold,"—but no, that will not work this time, for there is an extra member in the house, making a total of 101 instead of an even hundred—has in a proposed amendment establishing the principles of the initiative and referendum, while his colleague in the senate, Senator Humphreys of the 27th, has a similar resolution before that body, and Representative Matthews of Marion has on the calendar an amendment to abolish the office of county treasurer, and combine the duties of that office with those of the county tax collector.

Many Other Matters.
All these things are on the calendar, and many others beside. In fact, in the words of the apostle, the world itself may not be big enough to hold a record of the things that are now before the legislature will not be called upon to consider. But the general impression is that the legislature is one of the best, taking it all around, that the state has ever seen, from the character of the men who compose it and the work it has done so far. There are men of unquestioned integrity and ability in both houses, representing many different ideas of government, and there seems no danger at the present time that any legislation harmful to the best interests of the state will pass either house, much less both, but if any should, the executive veto may be brought into play, and the problem of this session seems to be not how to kill bad legislation, but how to accomplish the most good legislation in the sixty days during which the legislative body will be in session. The Sun of this city quotes Governor Broward as saying that he will institute a second libel suit against the Florida Times-Union, as a result of publication in one of the issues of that paper since the filing of his suit for $50,000 damages. Specifically, the publication upon which he will base his second action is one that was used against him in his campaign for governor, and republished several days ago in the Jacksonville paper, charging that Governor Broward at one time supported a negro for councilman in Jacksonville against a white democratic man. The governor at the time of publication some time ago during the campaign, denounced the statement as a lie.

GOVERNMENT BUILT VESSELS OF WAR.

New Orleans Picayune.

The enemies of the policy of building a certain proportion of the new warships needed to maintain the fighting strength of the navy at the principal navy yards never miss an opportunity of making it appear that the building of the battleship Connecticut at the New York yard was a costly and unprofitable undertaking. While it has always been admitted that the labor cost of navy yard building would show an increase over the figures paid by private contractors it was contended that in all other respects the record would be in favor of the government-built ship. The facts show that the Connecticut was actually constructed as rapidly as her sister ship, the Louisiana, and would have been commissioned as soon, had it not been for a legal obstacle encountered which prohibited the exceeding of the appropriation for any purpose for any one fiscal year. This law made it necessary to suspend work on the Connecticut for several months until the new fiscal year made fresh appropriations available.

With the single exception of the Louisiana no battleship was ever built in this country in as short a time as the Connecticut. Until the competition of the navy yard came into existence as a factor in warship building contractors took their time in completing government work, well knowing that congress would not exact the penalty for exceeding the contract time. Work on warships would be stopped for long periods at a time in order to employ the force of skilled workmen on other classes of work where penalties would be exacted for every non-fulfillment of the letter of the contract. As a result it took anywhere from four to five years to construct a battleship under contract with private firms. The work of the New York navy yard on the Connecticut and the stimulating influence which that work had on the contractor or building the Louisiana made it manifest that a battleship could be built and completed ready for sea within a period of three years.

Recognizing that the record is against their contentions, the enemies of warship building at navy yards are now endeavoring to discredit the Connecticut as an efficient and seaworthy vessel. They point to various mishaps which have attended her career, the typhoid fever which broke out on her during the cruise in the West Indies and the grounding in Culebra harbor, as if these mishaps could have the remotest association with the fact that she was built at a navy yard.

It is to be hoped that the government will keep alive the policy of having some warship building going on at all times in the leading navy yards. Such a policy is pursued in all countries maintaining considerable fleets, and may be accepted as the result of long years of experimenting. At the present time two naval colliers are being constructed by the government at the New York and Mare Island navy yards, and it is hoped that the navy department may yet decide to build one of the 20,000-ton battleships at the New York or Norfolk navy yards. The construction departments of both those yards, as well as some of the other yards, have been directed to prepare estimates and specifications as to the cost of undertaking the work. The act of congress authorizing two mammoth battleships gives the secretary of the navy ample discretionary power in the matter of constructing the ships either at the government plants or by private contract.

Prominent Frenchmen.
New York, April 8.—Four distinguished Frenchmen, who came here to attend the dedication of the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh this week, arrived here to-day on the steamer La Touraine.

The visitors are Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, D. L. C. Enlart, director of the French Trocadero Museum; J. Rais, secretary to the chamber of deputies, and Paul Doumer, ex-president of the French senate. Baron d'Estournelles de Constant is to be the guest of the president at the White House to-morrow.
